THE WORLD'S FOOD

November, 1917, issue

of

The Annals

"Considered by experts the most useful publication to date on the subject, containing thirty-five articles by authorities which survey the whole field-food supply, the food situation with the neutrals, food for the Allies, food utilization and conservation, production and marketing plans for next year, price control. Kellogg & Taylor's book points out the problem; this volume gives definite information."

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

LIBRARY BULLETIN,

January, 1918

---

"You have certainly got together the most valuable set of papers upon the problem which vitally concerns us all. Let me congratulate you personally on putting together such authoritative and necessary material."

ELIZABETH MACDONALD,
Editor, Housekeeping Department,
The Modern Priscilla, Boston, Mass.

"One of the most valuable contributions to the present food situation is made in 'The World's Food.' It contains figures and statistics not easily available, as well as articles of general interest both to scientific workers and to housekeepers. It deals not only with accomplished work, but with plans for another year. Not only America's food supply but that of Norway, Sweden, Holland, Switzerland, France, Great Britain and Japan is discussed by representatives of each nation, including such distinguished people as Nansen, Monod and Viscount Ishii."
